

This summer students enrolled in AP European History will need to read Machiavelli's The Prince and Thomas More's The Utopia before the start of class. The translations I have selected below are preferred, especially for The Prince, since they include better introductions and footnotes than most. If students have difficulty in understanding these texts, then they are encouraged to email me any questions at cbarron@parkviewbaptist.com. We will have graded discussion and an essay on these two weeks into the school year. The Letter to Francesco Vettori in the Appendix to the translation of the Prince I selected is also necessary to read. These books are short but challenging, so procrastination is extremely discouraged.

Thank you,
Clint Barron
